1. [redacted] Andrei Vishinsky, Soviet Foreign Minister, [redacted] in conference with Ana Pauker [redacted] 25X1 [redacted]. It is believed that this conference dealt with certain changes in the Rumanian Government that are presently under consideration. Attempts by representatives of the Government to sound out members of the National Peasant Party relative to participation in the new government were unsuccessful. Reports that approaches were made to imprisoned National Peasant leaders are believed to indicate that the Rumanian Government, at the instigation of the Soviets, intends to take measures against any eventual uprisings that are above and beyond any previously planned. These same reports are likewise designed to minimize protests addressed to the Rumanian Government by the United States and Great Britain.
2. It is considered possible that, contrary to the action in Bulgaria, the "exponent of nationalism" among the Rumanian Communists, Gheorghe Gheorghiu-Dej, will be given the post of Prime Minister.
